Modern Etiquette
Q. Are correspondence cards in vogue?
A. Yes, they are very popular, and in good taste for the short, normal kind of note. It is becoming more and more customary for men and women to use these cards, however, they should be used in a strictly formal correspondence.

Farm News and Reports

Survey of Farmer's Planting Intentions Shows

Crop Acreage May Be Lowest Since 1917

A reduction in the 1957 planted acreage for corn, oats, hay, and sweetpotatoes are in prospect while increases are indicated for soybeans, wheat and Irish potatoes. Farmers are expected to plant about the same acreage of peanuts and sorghums as in 1956. Cotton is not included in this report.

These estimates are made possible by voluntary reports from many Alabama farmers, to whom we acknowledge our sincere thanks. The purpose of this report is to assist growers in making such further changes in their acreage plans as may appear desirable. The acreage actually planted in 1957 may turn out to be large or smaller than indicated by report.

Soil Conservation News

Soil Conservationist

The Soil Conservation Service assisted L. W. Hataway write a conservation farm plan on his farm last week. He has a good pasture program started and plans to continue adding some of his steep land to pasture each year until he has it all planted. Living near Kinston, he also plans to control his hardwoods on the uplands so that pines will be released to grow.

Sam Hall who lives near Kinston had a field terraced this week. The SCS ran parallel terraces on about 12 acres of land. Hall stated that he had heard a lot about parallel terraces and wanted to try them. He stated that if he liked the system, he would have it put in on all his row crop land. The Kinston landowner is also planning 30 acres of land to be barked this year.

The Prestwood Brothers of near Kinston are planning 60 acres of land to be barked this spring. Some of this land is eroded and grass is a more suitable crop for this soil. The SCS assisted these farmers in planning their pasture program.

Bate Hataway of near Kinston is starting a grass base rotation this spring. He is planting his cotton acreage to bahia and sorghum. He is also planting as long as the Conservation Reserve Program stays in effect.

Fire losses cost farmers about $150 million each year in the United States. Spring is the time to clean up for efficiency and safety in the busy months ahead.

The full extent of reduction in 1957 acreage is more completely shown by comparisons of the totals of 59 crops planted in 1957. Dairymen Like Bulk Tanks

AUBURN — Bulk milk tanks are taking Alabama dairymen by storm. Seldom seen in the state until a few short months ago, these tanks are rapidly becoming commonplace dairy equipment.

API Extension Dairyman John Parrish reported this week that 250 milk producers in the state now use bulk milk tanks. And he predicted that by the end of the year more than 700 of these tanks will have been installed on Alabama dairy farms. Bulk tanks now in use vary in size from the 150-gallon capacity tank up to the 1500-gallon capacity.

Of course, the widespread change to more modern methods, such as bulk cooling tanks is creating problems for the small, grade A dairymen. Most of these problems are financial ones, since, as a rule this

Organized Effort Needed

AUBURN — Egg prices are dropping and there is no immediate rise in sight. Hence that do not lay must be culled. And there's only a poor market for hens. So what's the poultryman to do?

This question is puzzling most Alabama poultrymen, said API Extension Poultry Marketing Specialist Austin Ezell. The situation calls for initiative and cooperative effort on the part of poultrymen as well as their agents and processors, he added.

And to show just how cooperative effort and initiative can help, Ezell pointed to Lee County where something is happening, and quite successfully too. County Agent Jack Taylor organized a "hen market." It is designed to help the poultrymen get the best prices possible for their culled hens. The market has no expense and only a little time is involved. It operates on a vacant lot for one hour, one morning each week. Taylor has a processor on hand to buy culled hens the poultrymen bring. The price is paid at the curb.

Although returns are incomplete at the time of this article, it is believed that the campaign waged by the dry forces of Alabama has been crowned with success. However the vote was too close for comfort, and neither side had very much to crow about. Coffee County rolled up a substantial dry majority and announced to the world that a preponderance of our citizens prefer the present liquor laws, although they are very poorly enforced, rather than taking off the halter and turning the cruet loose, revenue or no revenue.

It is reported that one of Elba's well-known residents had a thrilling experience one night last week while strolling along the sidewalk on West Rushing Street. He came to the point where the walk ends abruptly and pitched headlong over the embankment. Fortunately the embankment is not very high, and he was not hurt. He was picked up by a passerby and taken to the hospital. He is now recovering from his fall.

Through the Keyhole

BY MRS. ROBERT CANNON

AMONG OUR FAVORITE people are these two, who make a most attractive tableau, pictured against the magnificent Cherry Trees that encircle the all their outdoor activities these days. And we would risk a small wager that every reader knows John and Ida Kimney, for friendliness is a habit with them.

The Kimneys' back yard is rapidly taking on a new look. Along with the baroque grill which architect Tom Beale designed as a "thank you" gesture, the adjoining recreation room offers all sorts of games. The Doctor has developed a green thumb and has much luck producing beautiful camellias and roses. And lately has developed a skill at close up photographs of the individual flowers.

Can't discuss the Kimneys without mentioning their fine young son Andy, who is quite dear to our hearts and who's Courtney's Godfather. A very happy family is this one.

FESTIVITIES have been many and varied for popular Daisy Cotney who last Saturday became Mrs. Wilson H. Martin. The parties were all lovely, but none prettier than the rehearsal supper given by Mr. & Mrs. Grafton Young. Daisy is well known to Elbians as she has worked in the Welfare Department here for several years.

The wedding was impressively performed by Mr. Hollis Robertson of Selma and was enriched by the voices of the Choral Group of Montgomery. Music included the old favorites, "O Lord, Be Glorified," "Sweetest Story Ever Told," Daisy's sister, Pat, sang "Through the Keyhole" and the bride and groom, Jimmy Young.

GEORGE ANDREWS REPORTS from WASHINGTON

WHAT ABOUT THE FIRE ANTS? — My mail has been filled with letters lately asking me that question. About 27 years ago, a few South American "fire ants" found their way into the United States. Experts think they arrived at Mobile first. They immediately began to spread. For a long time they didn't attract much attention because they looked like the familiar native variety. But these foreign ants are dangerous.

They destroy citrus and vegetable crops; they infest fields, homes and lawns; they build troublesome mounds and their sting is most painful to people and animals. At the last count, these tiny insects had invaded some 40 counties in Alabama and had spread to nine other Southern states. They had traveled as far north as Wake, N. C. The situation has become so desperate that the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, headed by Walter L. Randolph, passed a resolution on the 7th of this month, asking for Federal help to stamp them out. The Federation proposed a six-year, $10 million program.

Now it looks like help is on the way. Hearings on the "fire ants" were held last week before the House Agriculture Committee and they gave their "okay" to the Abernathy Post Control Bill which I plan to support. Also, Senator Lister Hill has introduced a bill in the Senate calling for Federal help in controlling the ant.

Anyone who is interested in learning how to control these ants on his own property (what to do until the Federal Government can help) may have a booklet on their control by writing to my office. Another booklet on the subject is available from the office of P. O. Davis, Director, Extension Service, APL Auburn.

Unmet Needs of Taxpayers

Recently the Coffee County Department of Pensions and Security put out its annual report. It was entitled the "Unmet Needs of People." The report states that the department's purpose is "to meet as many existing economic and other needs as possible within the limitations of law, funds and agency policy." As far as we can determine by cursory observation, the department is carrying out its objective as well as could be expected.

The report goes on to make a good case for higher payments to the aged, disabled, blind and other needy adults, needy children, children in foster care, unmet medical needs of people as well as the need for more funds for administration. In summation, the report makes this recommendation: "To enable the agency to meet more adequately and serve people better, the Department recommends that the 1957 Legislature provide more funds for all categories and funds for medical care, remove the legal limit on administrative costs and create public nursing homes."

This is all very well, but where does the money come from for these expanded programs? The only source of income for the state is the already abused taxpayer who coughs up about one third of his income now to one source of taxation or another. It means he would have to dig still deeper.

Most folks are not exactly rolling in wealth. Mothers still turn the collars on Johnny's shirt, pop wears his suit as long as possible and lots of homemakers make their own dresses and other wearing apparel for the family. Mothers who do not do that usually work outside the home to supplement the family income.

But no matter how the average family does it, there is still a mighty squeeze on the budget and a lot of "unmet needs" within their own household. They run all the way from straightening Junior's teeth to putting a coat of paint on the "old homestead" which they own jointly with the FHA or bank.

It is not right to ask the working public to dig any deeper for the "unmet needs" of others when they have so many of their own. A man and wife who work and slave to raise and educate a family should also be allowed a few of the luxuries and advantages they have earned. Otherwise, why should they work? It would be a lot easier to draw a welfare check.

on New Home

ample, Bob Polson donated all the concrete blocks used and NASCO also was a liberal giver. There were many others.

Grady Thomas, post commander, said that all the note at the bank had not been paid off but will be retired through receipts from the barbecue Saturday and income from renting the building to other groups such as the youth recreation board. The Board already has spoken for the building for Thursday evenings.

Accomplishment of the local Legion post is commendable because its means of raising funds are so limited. Lodges and veterans' organizations in other areas rely heavily on a "club" setup where the sale of beverages makes a lot of the expense of maintaining a post home. This source of funds is obviously not available here.

The new home will mean a good deal to the community because it provides a place for different organizations to meet as well as a more suitable spot for holding dances such as the Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsors during the Christmas holidays. The Legion is to be congratulated on this important achievement and for making a needed contribution to the town's social life.

What Happens When Viewers Have "Pay TV"

The past week or so there has been quite a spate of announcements in the daily papers about big name TV programs being cancelled along with predictions that other casualties are sure to follow. Edgar Bergen, Jane Wyman, Lucy-Desi and others have been cut off by their sponsors.

According to newspaper reports this panic of cancellations comes about as a result of the tremendous financial pressure on the sponsors. Important programs competing with each other for name guest stars have driven cost of TV programs up to the point where even the most widely distributed product can't hope to have an increase in sales large enough to offset the cost of the program.

Every time sponsors start complaining about high costs of putting on TV programs as compared to the maximum increase in sales they can expect as a result of the advertising, someone suggests "pay TV." That's where the viewer in the home would pay 50c or $1.00 for the privilege of seeing his favorite program on his $400 TV set. That might not work out too well. A man is informed that on a certain night at a designated hour, he can see the opening night show of a highly-touted Broadway play. He makes arrangements to pay his student and the pictures gets uncancelable for his set. About the middle of the first act comes "Network Troubles" or "Sorry, It's Us."

When an Elbian goes own to the Elba Theater and pays his admission, he knows what the picture will be and has every reason to believe that he will get to the show from start to finish. In the seven years we have been in Elba, we have never heard of Dozier Brothers having "Network Trouble" and being unable to finish a show.

The viewer has been trained by other entertainment media to expect a full show for his attendance fee. He expects to see the show from start to finish or at least have the privilege of walking out if he does not like it. "Network Trouble" will leave him with a "groggled feeling."

That problem will have to be whipped before pay TV gets really popular.

Housing Code Objectives Endorsed

Restrictions imposed by the Housing Code adopted some months ago by the Elba city council are just now making themselves felt. In increasing large numbers, builders and homeowners wanting to improve their property are bumping into regulations that have never before been considered in Elba.

A building permit issued by T. M. Stroud, inspector for the city, has to be secured before construction can begin. He also checks it when it's finished. This applies to large and small builders. (It is only a matter of time until someone irritated by restrictions imposed by the code publicly questions if everyone is buying building permits. Then a check will be made and those who did not get the necessary papers will be subject to penalties provided in the code.)

An explanation of why the Elba city council under two different administrations pursued the course of adopting a building code probably will help many see the necessity of improving regulations. Under the impetus of the slum clearance program on Claxton Street, the city adopted its housing code. A municipal housing code is distinctly different from the usual building code because it seeks to achieve some of the environmental standards for existing housing and zoning ordinances, subdivision controls and modern fire, health and safety codes for new housing. Housing codes generally contain requirements for plumbing, heating and lighting and occupancy standards directed toward control of overcrowding of structures and overcrowding of neighborhoods. To qualify for federal aid for either slum clearance or neighborhood conservation under the Housing Act of 1954, communities without such codes or without the procedure for enforcing scattered regulations must demonstrate they are working towards this goal. This requirement is one of seven elements of what is known as a local "workable program" for urban renewal.

The Elba Planning Commission prepared the housing code for the town, held a public hearing at which no protests were heard and then gave a final draft of the code to the city council. The council adopted it.

The code's general objectives are to provide more decent, healthier and safer housing, renewing substandard sections of the city, and eliminating slums. Regulations keep new slums from forming faster than the old ones can be removed.

Some persons who run afoul of the myriad regulations covered in the book called "Southern Building Code" will be annoyed the day the city government imposed this milestone of "red tape" around their necks.

However, the general objectives of the code adopted by the council in the past two years are to be strongly endorsed. On the whole they are progressive, decent, healthier and safer housing, renew substandard sections of Elba and eliminate and prevent slums. The regulations are needed to bring the town a well-rounded residential growth.

RAM SALE

The fifth annual purchased ram sale of the Alabama Sheep and Wool Growers Association will be held April 4 at the State Fairgrounds in Birmingham. W. H. Gregory, API Extension Livestock Specialist, announced this week.

Approximately 300 persons are expected to attend. Animals will be shown in the morning and the sale will begin at 1 P. M. About 70 rams — Suffolk, Hampshire, Dorset, Montadale, Southdown and Columbia breeds — will be offered for sale.

FARM BRIEFS

Increasing the size of the laying flocks, adding machinery and equipment, and rearranging poultry buildings and equipment can cut annual labor per 100 laying hens from 250 hours to 30 or 40 hours, according to studies conducted at the Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station.

The thickness of the hog's backfat, whether breeding or market animal, is now generally recognized as the measurement for determining just how lean the pork will be.

UNDER GOV. FOLSOM
Gov. James E. Folsom noted this week that some 2,000 miles of roads have been built in Alabama during the past 24 months.

The Governor called this "an important investment for the future economic welfare of our State."

After studying a special State Highway Department report prepared by Director Herman Nelson, the Governor further noted that $165 million had been spent on these new and modernized highways and roads of the States which is a record unequalled for any comparable period in Alabama history.

Gov. Folsom also estimated that anticipated State Highway Department revenues, plus available Federal funds for road building, would give Alabama an easy all-time four-year record of $312 million worth of roads and bridges by the end of 1939.

The Governor pointed out that good modern highways play a leading role when industrialists are considering an area in which to locate a new plant. The Chief Executive also pointed out that today the travel counselors and tourist agencies are routing many more of their hundreds of thousands of clients over Alabama roads because of their modernization and extra safety.
